Kabari Bhattacharya

Kabari Bhattacharya is a former Partner at EY, where she spent over 20 years advising Boards, Chief Risk Officers, Chief Sustainability Officers and senior leaders across the financial services sector on governance, resilience, climate and nature-related risk and long-term transformation. She has led major programmes that help organisations navigate complex regulatory environments, embed sustainability into strategy, and mobilise capital towards sustainable finance and nature-positive outcomes. She is passionate about urban nature recovery, and the role London can play as a global “City in Nature”.

Kabari brings experience in convening senior decision-makers, shaping multi-stakeholder partnerships, and designing impact-led programmes that deliver measurable outcomes for communities and nature. She has a particular interest in how London Wildlife Trust can scale its influence across the city’s reserves, strengthen its advocacy, and build long-term transformation partnerships with corporates, boroughs and institutions.

Kabari lives in Greenwich and spends much of her leisure time in London’s parks, woodlands and wetlands walking her golden retriever. She is committed to supporting the Trust’s mission to inspire Londoners, influence decision-makers and accelerate nature’s recovery across the capital.

Joanna Davidson CBE

Joanna has substantial experience of senior leadership in the public and charitable sectors having been chief executive of a county council, London borough and national charity. Her professional background is in housing and regeneration, and she is especially interested in bringing nature closer to people’s homes.

Alongside her mainstream career she has held non-executive and chair roles with a range of organisations including Notting Hill Housing Trust, Shelter, Oxford Brookes University and the Government Office for the South-East. She is currently Chair of Governors of WM College in Camden.

Her interest in wildlife conservation began as a teenage volunteer with the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers, and in the 1980’s she was part of a small group that set up the London Wildlife Trust. Her involvement with the Wildlife Trusts has also included periods as Chair of the Berkshire, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire Wildlife Trust and as a Council member of the Royal Society of Wildlife Trusts.

She has recently moved back to central London and is delighted to be involved in helping to support London’s wildlife again.
